CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

Reliable – Rather than working in sporadic, excited bursts that leave things half finished, Defenders are meticulous and careful. They take a steady approach, ensuring that things are done to the highest standard – and often going well beyond what is required.

Hardworking – Defenders don't just get their work done – they take pride in it. People with this personality type often form an emotional attachment to the projects and organizations that they've dedicated themselves to, and they won't rest until they've done their share – or more than their share – to be of

PERSONALITY TRAITS

P THE HIGHEST STANDARDS - I am known for my humility, and I rarely seek the spotlight. For me, "good enough" is rarely good enough. I can be meticulous to the point of perfectionism. I take my responsibilities personally, consistently going above and beyond and doing everything that I can to exceed others' expectations.

IDEALS

I will do anything to protect the proper order of the world against the forces of Chaos that seek to disrupt

BONDS

Reluctant to Change – Defenders are among the personality types that struggle the most with change. Breaking with tradition isn't easy for Defenders, who place great value on history and precedent. Even when change is necessary, they may wait until the situation reaches a breaking point before altering course.

FLAWS

I watched the world unravel one thread at a time.

My homeland—once proud, principled, orderly—fell to rot not in war, but in whispers. Corruption crept through the nobility like ivy through stone, twisting judgment, bending rules. And worse, the very church meant to guard our souls against such decay welcomed the chaos with open arms, too drunk on their own power to see it for what it was.

By the time I realized how deep it ran, it was too late. The people lost faith. The laws meant nothing. Fires lit the horizon, and neighbors turned on each other. I buried friends who'd once preached peace. I buried family who trusted in justice that never came.

I swore an oath, that day—not to a god, but to the idea of order. To structure, discipline, balance. When my prayers were finally answered, it wasn't with comfort—it was with purpose. The divine showed me that faith isn't about feeling good. It's about doing good. Even when it's hard. Especially when it's hard.

Now I go where the cracks begin to show—where systems strain under pressure, where chaos claws at the seams. I build, I bind, I enforce. Quietly. Reliably. Unshakably.

Change comes, yes—but not in madness. Not in fire. Change must be guided, understood, woven with care. If I seem slow to act, it's because I know what happens when we act too fast. When we abandon foundation for flash.

I'm not here for glory. I'm not here to lead revolutions. I'm here to hold the line.

Because once order breaks, there's no putting it back the same way.

And I will not let another home fall.
