CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

HARDWORKING – I don't just get my work done – I take pride in it. I often form an emotional attachment to the projects and organizations that I've dedicated themself to, and I won't rest until I've done my share – or more than my share – to be of help.

RELIABLE – Rather than working in sporadic, excited bursts that leave things half finished, I am meticulous and careful. I take a steady approach, ensuring that things are done to the highest standard – and often going well beyond what is required.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

THE GIFT OF LOYALTY - I tend to feel most energized and effective when I am showing up for someone who needs my help. My most distinctive trait is loyalty. Rare is it when I allow a friendship or relationship to fade away from lack of effort. I am known for dropping everything and lending a hand whenever a friend or family member is going through a hard time.

IDEALS

I protect those who cannot protect themselves.

BONDS

TOO ALTRUISTIC – My giving, generous nature can leave me vulnerable to being taken advantage of by others. It can be hard for me to rock the boat and stand up to someone who isn't pulling their own weight.

FLAWS

In the heart of the Sword Coast, where the winds whispered through ancient trees and the echoes of legends lingered, I lived as a human with high elf lineage. Raised among the common folk, my roots were firmly embedded in the simplicity of life, pursuing a humble profession as a woodcutter. The rhythmic sounds of the forest and the honest toil of my labor brought me solace.

However, fate had other plans for me when a shadow loomed over the region. A lord seeking to defend the land recognized my potential and recruited me into the lord's army. My journey from woodcutter to soldier marked the beginning of a heroic tale. My journey took a significant turn when, in the heat of battle, I displayed heroism that did not go unnoticed. Rising to a leadership position, I was commended for my bravery, and the experience set me on a different path. I embraced my innate magical abilities, becoming a War Mage Wizard.

My strong work ethic and unwavering sense of duty defined my personality. Hardworking by nature, I took pride in every task, forming emotional attachments to projects and organizations. My reliability became legendary, approaching duties with meticulous care and often going well beyond what was required.

My altruistic nature, while a strength, posed challenges. My giving and generous demeanor sometimes left me vulnerable to being taken advantage of by others. The struggle to stand up to those not pulling their own weight became a personal challenge, as my innate desire to help often overshadowed concerns about self-preservation.

The gift of loyalty defined my character. Feeling most energized and effective when showing up for someone in need, I invested a great deal of energy into maintaining strong connections with loved ones. Known for more than just saying "How

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Azuth

Alignment: Lawful Neutral
Alternate Names: The High One, The Lord of Spellcraft, The First Magister
Category: None
Domains: Arcana, Knowledge
Pantheon: Faerûnian
Symbol: Left hand pointing upward, outlined in fire

Few pay homage to Azuth aside from wizards. For them, the High One is the ultimate embodiment of all that they hold dear.

Mystra serves as goddess of magic; Oghma is god of knowledge; and Deneir is god of writing and language. Azuth takes aspects of these general fields and applies them to the specific practices of wizards. For instance, while Mystra is the deity who represents the soul, art, and wonder of magic, Azuth is god of a wizard's long hours of study, exacting standards of movement and speech, and cramped, ink-stained fingers. Wizards invoke Azuth when they scribe scrolls, inscribe magic circles, attempt to memorize spells, and even when they cast spells. Often this acknowledgment comes in the form of silently forming Azuth's holy symbol, pointing the index finger of the left hand to the sky. For many wizards, the gesture is so commonplace in their lives that it becomes an unconscious habit.

Temples dedicated to Azuth are scarce, and clerics of the deity are extremely rare. Even in magic-saturated Halruaa, only a handful of holy places are dedicated to Azuth. Sometimes a statue or a shrine dedicated to him stands in a corner of a temple to Mystra or another deity. More often, a wizard has a personal shrine at home. Azuth is represented at such sites as a hooded and bearded figure with left hand held high, finger pointed up. Sometimes he is represented by merely the hand. In either case, the finger often serves as a candleholder or as the point of origin for a light spell.
