CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

Efficient – Commanders see inefficiency not just as a problem in its own right, but as something that pulls time and energy away from all their future goals, an elaborate sabotage consisting of irrationality and laziness. People with the Commander personality type will root out such behavior wherever they go.

Self-Confident – Commanders couldn't do this if they were plagued by self-doubt – they trust their abilities, make known their opinions, and believe in their capacities as leaders.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

- A WORTHY CHALLENGE - I am a true powerhouse, and I cultivate an image of being larger than life – and often enough I am. I need to remember though, that my stature comes not just from my own actions, but from the actions of the team that props me up, and that it's important to recognize the contributions, talents and needs, especially from an emotional perspective, of my support network

IDEALS

My clan is the most important thing in my life, even when they are far from me.

BONDS

Impatient – Some people need more time to think than others, an intolerable delay to quick-thinking Commanders.

FLAWS

I was born among the golden fields of our clan's farmstead, where the soil was rich, the labor honest, and the sky—unpredictable. We dragonborn are taught to endure, to weather the storms life sends our way. But what do you do when the storm never ends?

The rains came too often, or not at all. Crops drowned in flooded fields one season, only to wither to dust the next. The elders whispered of the mountain, of a hermit wizard who played at godhood with the skies. I didn't believe in ghost stories—until the stories took our harvest, and with it, our hope.

I left the plow behind and marched toward the mountains with nothing but conviction and the lightning in my blood. When I finally found the old mage, I expected arrogance, malice—something I could strike down. What I found was... confusion. Regret. The wizard was no tyrant, just a recluse, so obsessed with mastering the elements that he'd never considered the ripple effect of his spells.

He offered me a choice. "You want to change the weather? Bend it to your will? You could learn arcane ways, like I did… or you could seek the favor of the divine. The storm answers both—just differently."

I chose the divine path. The storm is not just wind and thunder—it is judgment, cleansing, fury, and rebirth. I felt that in my soul. I found a calling in the storm god's voice, in the discipline and focus that clerical devotion demanded. Magic through sheer will is impressive, but faith… faith is purpose. And I needed purpose as much as power.

I trained under wandering clerics, studied every scripture on Tempest domains, and eventually, the storm came when I called. Not wild, not vengeful—but focused. Measured. Efficient.

Now, I wander—bringing justice to those who
