IDEALS

My life's work is a series of tomes related to the planar portals that connect the Inner and Outer planes.

BONDS

Impatient – Logicians take pride in their knowledge and in sharing their ideas. When it comes to explaining their rationale, however, they aren't always patient. If their conversation partner doesn't follow along or seem sufficiently interested, Logicians may give up with a dismissive "never mind."

FLAWS

I have always believed that the universe is a puzzle — vast, complex, but ultimately solvable. Patterns exist, even in chaos, and I have dedicated my life to uncovering them. My name? Names are labels. I prefer to be known by my work: The Tome of Thresholds, a lifelong compilation detailing the portals that connect the Inner and Outer Planes.

I began as a sage, studying planar theory in isolation. Books, scrolls, ancient runes — they were all far more coherent than most people I've met. Emotions are unpredictable, messy. But portals… portals are elegant. They obey laws, even if we don't yet fully understand them. And through their study, I began to glimpse the architecture behind all existence — a network of connections, like veins through a cosmic body.

It was during my research in an ancient ruin whose name was long forgotten that I first saw a rift behave... strangely. The portal didn't just shimmer — it shuddered. Something was trying to come through. Not wanderers. Invaders. Creatures of shadow, fire, thought — each from a different realm, but with a common goal: entropy. Not in the philosophical sense, but the kind that unravels reality at its seams.

That day changed everything. I could no longer just write about the portals. I had to protect them — or more accurately, protect us from what lies beyond them.

I became a Horizon Walker not for glory, but necessity. My boots have touched stone in the City of Brass, skated ice in Cania, and waded through dreams in the Far Realm. I don't go looking for trouble, but trouble often finds the thin places between worlds. My knowledge makes me a sentinel, watching the edges of reality for tears in its fabric.

I still keep notes, of course — each journey, each
