CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

OBJECTIVE – I care about the truth. Rather than taking comfort in ideology or received ideas, I want to understand what's really going on beneath the surface of things. As a result, I can be relied upon to combat bias and misinformation, even when it isn't easy to do so – and I expect other people to be honest with me in return.

CURIOUS – I am always casting about for new pursuits, hobbies, and areas of research. One week, I might be obsessed with geophysics, and the next, I might lose myself in videos about guitar building. When inspiration strikes, I go all in.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

ELEMENTARY MY DEAR WATSON - I love to analyze patterns. Without necessarily knowing how I do it, I often have a Sherlock Holmes–like knack for spotting discrepancies and irregularities. In other words, it's a bad idea to lie to me.

IDEALS

I hope to bring prestige to a library, a museum, or a university.

BONDS

IMPATIENT – I take pride in my knowledge and in sharing my ideas. When it comes to explaining my rationale, however, I am not always patient. If my conversation partner doesn't follow along or seem sufficiently interested, I may give up with a dismissive "never mind."

FLAWS

I am a seeker of truth and a lover of knowledge. From my earliest days, I've felt an insatiable curiosity, an unquenchable thirst for understanding that led me to explore the depths of the arcane and the mysteries of the world.

Before the adventuring life found me, I spent my youth crawling through dusty crypts and forgotten ruins, pilfering relics from the past. It wasn't just about the coin; it was the thrill of uncovering the secrets left behind by ancient civilizations. Amidst these discoveries, one relic held special significance—a medallion adorned with the arcane symbol of a master Illusionist. Its origins may have been shrouded in mystery, but its emotional value was undeniable.

My analytical mind has always been a double-edged sword. I crave the truth and detest misinformation. Ideologies and received ideas have little place in my pursuits; instead, I aim to uncover the reality beneath the surface of things. This objective mindset makes me a reliable combatant against bias and deception, and I demand the same honesty from others.

My insatiable curiosity leads me from one pursuit to another, embracing schools of magic, research areas, and obsessions with fervor. Whether delving into deconstructing elaborate and ancient illusions in order to find hidden antiquities or creating new illusions out of whole cloth to enhance the displays at museums, I immerse myself in the depths of my newfound interests, absorbing knowledge like a sponge.

Patterns call out to me, and irregularities don't escape my keen gaze. Like a Sherlock Holmes of old, I have a knack for spotting discrepancies that make lying a futile endeavor in my presence.

Entering ruins and dungeons, I feel a connection to their builders, discerning their purpose and origin effortlessly. A medallion might be my only

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Garl Glittergold

Alignment: Lawful Good
Category: None
Domains: Trickery
Pantheon: Gnome
Province: Primary god of gnomes
Symbol: Gold nugget

When gnome children hear their first stories about the gods, they are introduced to a gold-skinned gnome with a wide grin and glittering gemstone eyes that shift colors like a kaleidoscope. The youngsters quickly learn to recognize that their favorite character, the god of the gnomes, is about to steal the show.

A joker and a prankster, Garl Glittergold reminds gnomes that life is to be taken lightly, and that a good laugh will serve them better than a grim attitude. When Garl cavorts with mischief on his mind, Moradin's beard might end up woven with giggling flowers, and Gruumsh's axe could sprout braying donkey heads at the most inopportune time.

Cooperation Is Key

The legends about Garl Glittergold inspire gnomes to work together. Garl knows that many heads and many hands make light work. Although he also plays many pranks on his own, Garl is the one who gathers the heroes together for an enterprise that requires all their talents. To provide specific guidance, Garl might send an omen to nudge a group of gnomes in a certain direction, or even manifest an avatar in the middle of a gnome burrow. When Garl makes one of these rare appearances, it is to resolve a dispute that threatens a community.

Brains over Brawn

Garl favors trickery and illusion over direct combat, preferring to use his mind to overcome a problem rather than his steel. For gnomes to thrive, they must use their intellect and ingenuity. But when push comes to shove, Garl uses Arumdina, his intelligent two-headed battle axe-capable of cleaving through any substance-to escape a perilous situation.
