CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

VERY RESPONSIBLE – My' word is a promise, and a promise means everything. I would rather run myself into the ground with extra days and lost sleep than fail to deliver the results I said I would. Loyalty is a strong sentiment for me, and I fulfill my duties to the people and organizations I have committed myself to.
CREATE AND ENFORCE ORDER – My primary goal is to be effective in what I've chosen to do, and I believe that this is accomplished best when everyone involved knows exactly what is going on and why. Unclear guidelines and people who break established rules undermine this effort, and are rarely tolerated by me. Structure and rules foster dependability; chaos creates unforeseen setbacks.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

PICKING UP THE SLACK I may find myself doing other people's work – and not getting credit for it. My dedication is an admirable quality, and it drives many of my accomplishments. But it can also become a weakness that other people take advantage of. With my strong work ethic and sense of duty, I may routinely find myself shouldering other people's responsibilities. Even if I don't complain about the situation,

IDEALS

I find magic in all its forms to be compelling. The more magical a place, the more I am drawn to it.

BONDS

ALWAYS BY THE BOOK – I believe that things work best with clearly defined rules, but this makes me reluctant to bend those rules or try new things, even when the downside is minimal. Truly unstructured environments leave me all but paralyzed.

FLAWS

In the realm of mystic energies and enchanted landscapes I found my calling as a wizard that specialized in calling forth spells that are protective in nature. My fate became intertwined with the whimsical Feywild, a journey that began as a studious practitioner of the arcane, devoted to the pursuit of magical knowledge. However, my life took an unexpected turn when I found myself drawn into the Feywild during a magical ritual gone awry.

Within the ethereal realms of the Feywild, my senses were heightened, and the magic coursing through the vibrant landscapes touched my soul. The mystical energies changed me in subtle ways, leaving a fey mark upon my being. My eyes, once ordinary, now swirled with iridescent colors, a testament to the Feywild's influence. I embraced this transformation, finding myself recognized by natives of the Feywild who perceived me as one of their own.

With a staff as my arcane focus, I delved deeper into the magical arts, drawn to the captivating allure of all forms of magic. My experiences in the Feywild heightened my appreciation for the arcane, making me feel a profound connection to magical places and the enchantments that surrounded me.

I held my word as a sacred promise. Loyalty was a strong sentiment, and I dedicated myself to fulfilling my duties to the people and organizations I had committed to. This sense of responsibility extended to the creation and enforcement of order. I believed that clarity and structure were paramount for effectiveness, and I couldn't tolerate unclear guidelines or those who broke established rules.

Always by the book, I was reluctant to bend rules or try new things, even when the potential downsides were minimal. My adherence to clearly defined rules provided me with a sense of security,

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Eldath

Alignment: Neutral Good
Alternate Names: The Quiet One, The Guardian of Groves, The Mother of the Waters
Category: None
Domains: Life, Nature, Peace
Pantheon: Faerûnian
Symbol: Waterfall plunging into a still pool

Eldath is the goddess of waterfalls, springs, pools, stillness, peace, and quiet glades. She is thought to be present at many such places, particularly those that serve as druid groves. Eldath is a goddess of comfort, healing, and calm. Her blessed waters heal the sick, cure madness, and comfort the dying.

Most rural places have a pond or a glade that locals ascribe to Eldath. Tradition dictates that it be a place of quiet reflection where others are left to their thoughts. A body of water such as a pond or a spring typically serves as a repository of offerings. If the holy site is a glade, a stream one crosses along the way might serve as the repository, or a prominent bush or tree in the glade might be the place where people tie offerings. Typical offerings are broken weapons or items that are remembrances of arguments, which the faithful discard while making a wish for peace in the future. Many of those who favor Eldath are pacifists or people who are troubled by violence they have witnessed or experienced.

Eldath's priests don't organize into large sects. Indeed, many are itinerant, wandering between various holy sites and shrines, seeing that the locations are cared for and that they remain places of sweet serenity. The faithful of Eldath are usually close to nature, and allied to druids, who count Eldath among the First Circle. It is taboo to strike a priest of Eldath, and killing one is said to bring great misfortune. Despite the measure of protection that this belief affords them, most priests of Eldath avoid conflicts rather than attempting to quell them. Those who serve Eldath are happy to preside over peaceful negotiations and to certify treaties, but they can't force others to engage in harmony.
