CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

- Informed – Few personality types are as devoted as Architects to developing rational, correct, and evidence-based opinions. Rather than hunches or half-baked assumptions, they base their conclusions on research and analysis. This gives them the conviction that they need to stand up for their ideas, even in the face of disagreement.
- Determined – This personality type is known for being ambitious and goal-oriented. Architects won't rest until they've achieved their own definition of success – which usually entails mastering the subjects and pursuits that matter to them

PERSONALITY TRAITS

P A THIRST FOR KNOWLEDGE - I don't just learn new things for show. I genuinely enjoy expanding the limits

IDEALS

I an a hoarder of written knowledge. I will do anything to find tomes that contain the secrets of the universe

BONDS

- Arrogant – Architects might be knowledgeable, but they're not infallible. Their self-assurance can blind them to useful input from other people – especially anyone they deem to be intellectually inferior. These personalities can also come across as needlessly harsh or single-minded in trying to prove others wrong

FLAWS

They call me a merchant, but I deal in more than books—I deal in understanding. In truth. In whispers too old to have names.

I was born beneath amber leaves, in the season where things fade but memory clings. Autumn runs in my blood—a time of reflection, of quiet endings, of truth stripped bare. Perhaps that's why I was drawn to forgotten things: tomes whose pages still breathe, whose ink hums with the echoes of distant stars.

My shop is modest in appearance—wood, dust, firelight—but beneath the surface, it is a library of thresholds. Every spine holds a key. Every glyph dares you to open a door you can never close. Most browse. Some buy. A rare few understand. I always know who they are.

It was a book, of course, that changed everything.

Bound in leather I could never place—written in a script that bent the eye if stared at too long. It didn't call out, not in words. But in silence. In patterns. In truths too big for the page. I opened it.

I didn't go mad. Not quite. But I did begin to see.

The thing that wrote it—that thinks through it—offered me a pact. Not power for its own sake. Power for understanding. It doesn't lie. It doesn't need to. It shows. The Great Old One is not a god. It is an idea so vast, so ancient, it rewrites the word "meaning." Through it, I glimpse the geometry behind thought, the lattice beneath magic, the strings that bind time to itself.

In return, I collect.

I find books. Not just rare—forbidden. Not just forgotten—buried. I bring them back, catalog them, whisper their truths across planes. I am both servant and student. The arrangement suits me.
