CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

EMPATHETIC – I don't just care about other people in an abstract sense. I can actually feel another person's emotions, from joy and elation to sorrow and regret. Because of this sensitivity, I tend to be thoughtful and kindhearted, and I hate the idea of hurting anyone, even unintentionally.

GENEROUS – I rarely enjoy succeeding at other people's expense. I feel called to share the good things in my lilfe, give credit where it's due, and uplift the people around me. I want to contribute to a world where every voice is heard and no one's needs go unmet.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

IN SEARCH OF A CALLING - Like flowers in the spring, my creativity and idealism can bloom even after the darkest of seasons. Although I know the world will never be perfect, I still care about making it better however I can. This quiet belief in doing the right thing may explain why I so often inspire compassion, kindness, and beauty wherever I go.

IDEALS

I owe my life to the priest who took me in when my parents died.

BONDS

UNFOCUSED – My imaginative, introspective nature doesn't always lend itself to productivity. I get frustrated by how difficult I find it to buckle down and get things done. The problem isn't that I am incapable – rather, it's that I run into problems when I become so caught up in different ideas and ideals that I fail to commit to a course of action.

FLAWS

Born under the celestial influence of Aasimars, my early days were marked by tragedy. Orphaned after the untimely demise of my parents, my fate took a fortuitous turn when a compassionate priest took me in. This cleric, a guiding light in my life, instilled in me the values of compassion, kindness, and the pursuit of peace.

As an acolyte in the service of Eldath, the Goddess of Peace, I commanded respect from those who shared my faith. My proficiency in conducting religious ceremonies and performing sacred rites became a testament to my unwavering devotion. The temple, a sanctuary of solace and spiritual guidance, provided me with not only a place of residence but also the support of like-minded individuals.

Empathetic by nature, I possessed the ability to truly feel the emotions of others. From the heights of joy to the depths of sorrow, I embraced the full spectrum of human sentiment. This sensitivity fostered thoughtfulness and kindheartedness, shaping me into a gentle soul who abhorred the idea of causing harm, even unintentionally.

Generosity flowed through my veins. I found joy in sharing the blessings of my life, giving credit where it was due, and uplifting those around me. My altruistic nature led me to contribute to a world where every voice could be heard, and no one's needs went unmet.

However, I faced challenges in focusing my imaginative and introspective nature. Despite my capabilities, I struggled to commit to a singular course of action, often becoming entangled in the myriad of ideas and ideals that permeated my mind. This internal conflict between creativity and productivity became a recurring theme in my quest for purpose.

Driven by a quiet belief in doing what was right, I sought to make the world a better place, one act of

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Eldath

Alignment: Neutral Good
Alternate Names: The Quiet One, The Guardian of Groves, The Mother of the Waters
Category: None
Domains: Life, Nature, Peace
Pantheon: Faerûnian
Symbol: Waterfall plunging into a still pool

Eldath is the goddess of waterfalls, springs, pools, stillness, peace, and quiet glades. She is thought to be present at many such places, particularly those that serve as druid groves. Eldath is a goddess of comfort, healing, and calm. Her blessed waters heal the sick, cure madness, and comfort the dying.

Most rural places have a pond or a glade that locals ascribe to Eldath. Tradition dictates that it be a place of quiet reflection where others are left to their thoughts. A body of water such as a pond or a spring typically serves as a repository of offerings. If the holy site is a glade, a stream one crosses along the way might serve as the repository, or a prominent bush or tree in the glade might be the place where people tie offerings. Typical offerings are broken weapons or items that are remembrances of arguments, which the faithful discard while making a wish for peace in the future. Many of those who favor Eldath are pacifists or people who are troubled by violence they have witnessed or experienced.

Eldath's priests don't organize into large sects. Indeed, many are itinerant, wandering between various holy sites and shrines, seeing that the locations are cared for and that they remain places of sweet serenity. The faithful of Eldath are usually close to nature, and allied to druids, who count Eldath among the First Circle. It is taboo to strike a priest of Eldath, and killing one is said to bring great misfortune. Despite the measure of protection that this belief affords them, most priests of Eldath avoid conflicts rather than attempting to quell them. Those who serve Eldath are happy to preside over peaceful negotiations and to certify treaties, but they can't force others to engage in harmony.
