CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

Passionate – Protagonists are far from being boring do-gooders. These types brim with interests, and they take great pleasure in pursuing their hobbies – whether that's hiking, cooking, dancing, growing houseplants, or something else entirely. As a result, they rarely find themselves at a loss for something interesting to do.

Altruistic – These personalities are known for harboring a deep desire to be a force for positive change. Protagonists genuinely believe that if they bring people together, they can do a world of good.

PERSONALITY TRAITS

P LEADING THE WAY - I am a devoted altruists, ready to face slings and arrows in order to stand up for the people and ideas that I believe in. This strength of conviction bolsters my innate leadership skills, particularly my ability to guide people to work together in service of the greater good.

IDEALS

Power must belong to the people, not be hoarded by the few.

BONDS

Overly Idealistic – Protagonists tend to have clear ideas about what's right and what's wrong. They often think that everyone shares these fundamental principles – or, at least, that everyone should share these principles. So it can come as a genuine shock to Protagonists when people violate their core values, such as truth or justice.

FLAWS

I was born into velvet halls, marble staircases, and a family name that turned heads in court. My days were filled with tutors, libraries, and political dinners, and I learned early how easily power can be manipulated when it's concentrated in the hands of a single bloodline.

As I studied evocation at the arcane college—my passion lying not in destruction, but in creation and connection—I saw patterns too many others ignored. Kingdoms falling into ruin not from outside threats, but from the decay within. Arrogant monarchs. Corrupt judges. Lords playing at gods with no one to hold them accountable. I watched friends vanish under edicts, entire villages crumble beneath unfair taxes, and reformers executed without trial. That was when I made a quiet promise to myself: power must belong to the people, not be hoarded by the few.

So I stepped away from the comfort of inherited privilege. Not to hide from it, but to wield it differently. My education, my wealth, and my magic—I will use them to build something better. When I enter a kingdom where tyranny festers, I do not begin with fire and spellcraft. I begin with conversation, diplomacy, and a well-placed investment in those brave enough to lead their own people. But if my voice is ignored and peaceful means fail, then I will not hesitate to evoke more than words.

Many say my vision is naïve. That kings will never give up their thrones, that people will always need rulers, not partners. Perhaps they're right. But I believe leadership is not about power—it's about service. And I will walk ahead, even alone, to show what a just future can look like. If I must summon creatures from the outer planes to shield the innocent, I will. If I must stand between tyrants and the oppressed, I will.

Some call me overly idealistic. Maybe. But what is a world without ideals? Without a vision of
