CHARACTER APPEARANCE

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

DEDICATED – Seeing things to completion borders on an ethical obligation for me. Tasks aren't simply abandoned because they've become difficult or boring – I take them up when they are the right thing to do, and they will be finished so long as they remain the right thing to do.

STRONG WILLED – A strong will makes this dedication possible, and I don't give up my beliefs because of simple opposition. I defend my ideas and principles relentlessly, and must be proven clearly and conclusively wrong for my stance to budge

PERSONALITY TRAITS

LEADING BY EXAMPLE - I am aware of my surroundings and live in a world of clear, verifiable facts – the surety of my knowledge means that even against heavy resistance, I stick to my principles and push an unclouded vision of what is and is not acceptable. My opinions aren't just empty talk either, I am more than willing to dive into the most challenging projects, improving action plans and sorting details along the way, making even the most complicated tasks seem easy and approachable

IDEALS

I must set an example of hope for those who have given up.

BONDS

JUDGEMENTAL – I have strong convictions about what is right, wrong, and socially acceptable. My compulsion to create order often extends to all things and everyone, ignoring the possibility that there are two right ways to get things done. I do not hesitate to let these "deviants" know what they think, considering it my duty to set things right.

FLAWS

In the realm of Damara, where honor and duty were the guiding principles of warriors, I stood tall as a human paladin. My family's legacy of military service shaped my destiny, leading me to enlist in the kingdom's elite Imperial Guard. Swiftly rising through the ranks, I became known for my unwavering dedication, strong will, and commitment to justice.

I viewed tasks as ethical obligations, and once started, I saw them through to completion. My comrades admired my dedication, knowing that challenges only fueled my resolve. My strong will defended my principles relentlessly, standing firm even in the face of opposition.

The true test of my resolve came in captivity during a covert operation. Enduring thirst, starvation, and torture, I never broke. My unwavering commitment to principles and belief in the greater good sustained me through the darkest hours, becoming the cornerstone of my personal philosophy.

Escaping my captivity as an unstoppable living weapon, my spirit unbroken and my sense of duty strengthened, I deepened my understanding of the importance of hope in the face of despair. Setting an example of hope for those who had given up became a mission in itself. I also kept the dagger of the tormenting and depraved prison guard I overcame to escape.

Now I roam the land dual wielding my two swords that dispense justice, my every action guided by the lessons learned in captivity. My judgmental nature, born from strong convictions about right, wrong, and social order, leads me to hold others to a high standard. Correcting perceived deviations from the path of righteousness is my duty, and I lead by example, utilizing my sharp mind and verifiable facts to navigate the complexities of the world. I dive into the most challenging projects, making even the most complicated tasks seem

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Ilmater

Alignment: Lawful Good
Alternate Names: The Crying God, The Rack-Broken Lord, He Who Endures
Category: None
Domains: Life, Twilight
Pantheon: Faerûnian
Symbol: Hands bound at the wrist with red cord

Ilmater is the god of suffering, martyrdom, and perseverance, renowned for his compassion and endurance. It is he who offers succor and calming words to those who are in pain, victimized, or in great need. He is the willing sufferer, the one who takes the place of another to heft the other's burden, to take the other's pain. He is the god of the oppressed and the unjustly treated.

It is said that if he had his way, the Crying God would take all the suffering in the world onto himself, so as to spare others. Since he can't, he blesses those who endure on others' behalf, and he alleviates suffering when he can. Martyrs who die that others may live are always blessed by Ilmater with a final rest and reward in the god's afterlife, should they so choose.

Ilmater's priests take in the ill, the starving, and the injured, and his temples give most of what they receive to help offset the suffering of the world. His followers provide succor when they can, but also use force to put an end to torture and suffering inflicted on others. Ilmater's priests travel to places where the worst possible conditions exist, ministering to the needs of the oppressed, the deceased, and the poor. They put others ahead of themselves, are sharing of all they have, and emphasize the spiritual nature of life over the welfare of the material body.

Priests of Ilmater who are on a quest to aid others can be recognized by their hair shirts, vests of coarse fur worn against the bare skin. It is taboo to harm such priests as they go about their duties, such as when they administer to the wounded on a battlefield. The taboo is so strongly felt among humans that other races respect the custom. Even orcs and goblinoids will avoid directly attacking a peaceful priest of Ilmater, as long as the priest administers to their fallen warriors as well.

Most folk deeply respect the work and the sacrifice of Ilmater's faith, and lend aid to such endeavors where they can. When a temple of Ilmater sends its faithful to help refugees of war or victims of plague, their willingness to sacrifice their own well-being always prompts ordinary people to support them, whether they are inspired or shamed into action.
